Bush reflects Reagan image

by Scott R. Whitehead and Elizabeth Kimes

WASHINGTON — As the Reagan era comes to a close, all eyes in the nation are focused on successor George H. Bush as he prepares to take the oath of the office of President at 11:30 a.m. today.

Politicians on Capitol Hill — the hub of activity for the Bicentennial Presidential Inaugural — found themselves in the midst of the leadership passing ceremonies.

Two Ohio politicians contemplated the repercussions of Reagan's presidency and the expectations for the Bush-Quayle era. Congressman Paul E. Gillmor, R-Fifth District, Ohio, said over the past eight years, Reagan strengthened the image and economy of the United States.

"I think Reagan will be perceived as one of the better presidents," Gillmor said. "He stopped the growth in taxes which has clearly led to a better economic situation."

"The country's changed from a government taking an ever-increasing part of the average person's income and (Reagan) changed the philosophy that government ought to be involved in everyone's affairs."

While Bush will initiate policies that are his own, he still will continue to reflect the Reagan ideology, Gillmor said.

"Bush has the same general philosophy as Reagan," he said.

"He has talked openly about some of the issues, such as education and the environment, but Bush will not have to pursue the kind of increase in defense that Reagan had to when he took office."

Part of the success of Bush's campaign may be attributed to his pledge to be the "education president," said Congressman Robert McEwen, R-Sixth District, Ohio.

"We've come a long way towards focusing on education," he said. "After the declining test scores, the Reagan administration realized something needed to be done. (Bush) is in the position to be able to set some education standards."

As far as the responsibility of local and state governments in improving education, Gillmor said there is much work to be done.

"Education is still going to remain state and local responsibility as 93 or 94 percent of the school budget is local," he said. "The federal government can help by focusing these goals."

Both congressmen declined comment on Ohio governor Richard F. Celeste's recent proposal to hike taxes to create a $780 million education trust fund.

Gillmor and McEwen will celebrate Inauguration Day by hosting open houses for their constituents.

Citing the importance of the voting public, McEwen posed the question, "Who's going to be

Gillmor Senate tenure to begin

by Scott R. Whitehead and Elizabeth Kimes

WASHINGTON — Amidst all the inaugural hoopla, one freshman U.S. Congressman reflected on adding a new chapter to his political career.

Paul Gillmor of Port Clinton, sworn in Jan. 3, is still acclimating himself to his new office in Longworth House on Capitol Hill.

"We just got the pictures hung on the walls today," said Gillmor, who moved into his office Jan. 4.

The same day, Gillmor received the results of the much-anticipated Con-

Park gets $50,000

by Angela Blandina
assistant news editor

Wood County Commissioners contributed $50,000 Thursday toward the development of the University's industrial research park.

In his presentation to University President Paul Olscamp, Commissioner Leonard Stevens said his office is "happy to participate" in the park and will continue to support the University in its economic endeavors.

"We have vowed to help (the University) out more and more in economic development," he said at a press conference at the Chamber of Commerce.

In addition, Bowling Green Mayor Edwin Miller presented Olscamp with a check for $250,000 — matching the industrial grant awarded to the University in August by the Ohio Department of Economic Development.

Miller said the money is a stipend to be used toward the water and sewer system of the 88-acre, $1.9 million park, located east of I-75 and north of Wooster Street.

According to Olscamp, several companies are being considered as tenants. He declined to release names until plans are finalized, but did stipulate three criteria for prospective park tenants.

A business must "enhance the economic base of Bowling Green," while providing an opportunity for University interactions — one of the primary reasons for the park's existence, Olscamp said.

Potential tenants must also be compatible with the environment and existing structures of the park, he said.

Mid-American National Bank and Trust Co. meets the three requirements, Olscamp said. The company, headquartered in downtown Bowling Green, is the park's anchor tenant.

City of Bowling Green and the Wood County Commissioners office each donated $250,000 for the development of the park at a press conference held Thursday at the Chamber of Commerce.

Mid-Am representative Jerome Bechstein, executive vice president, said the company plans to build an operations center at the site. The center will house the company's computer, personnel and accounting offices, Bechstein said.

He said Mid-Am officials have met with Robert Patton, dean of the College of Business Administration, and are looking at ways to interphase with the University.

"We are interested in utilizing their resources, their people, their technology and their professors," Bechstein said.

Bush set for today

by Lee Byrd
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — George Bush spent his last day as vice president Thursday rehearsing the presidential inaugural address he will deliver at noon Friday and saluting the mentor whose shoes, he said, would be "pretty darn hard to fill."

On the eve of his installation into the heavy responsibilities of office, Bush was upbeat. "I really feel this," he said. "Our best days are yet to come."

Bush spent much of the day out of the public eye, preparing for one sentimental last visit to the Oval Office as a loyal subordinate, giving interviews and rehearsing the 15-minute address which will set the tone of his administration.

For this state occasion, Washington's weather was atypical.

Visitors and Washingtonians alike strolled with topcoats unbuttoned in the balmy-for-January sunshine. A mixture of sunshine and clouds, with an afternoon chill, was predicted for today, when Bush takes the oath.

Four years ago, the weather was so harsh that President Reagan had to be sworn in indoors and his inauguration parade was cancelled.

Turnpike expanding

New interchanges link travelers to Toledo

by John Kohlstrand
staff reporter

Travelers will have greater access to the Toledo area upon completion of two Ohio Turnpike interchanges.

The additions will connect Interstate 75 and Toledo Express Airport to the turnpike, costing the Ohio Turnpike Commission $25 million and $10 million respectively, said Bob Barnett, director of information and research.

According to Mark Sweeney, director of public relations for the Toledo-Lucas County Port Authority, the new interchanges will complete a needed and long overdue transportation network.

"The Port Authority has been after the Turnpike Commission many years to build these interchanges," Sweeney said.

He said the airport interchange will make the Toledo Express Airport even more important in attracting air cargo and airline passengers to Toledo.

Although Barnett said he does not expect construction on the airport interchange to congest traffic, he said minimal problems may be caused by the construction on I-75.

Dave Miesmer, director of the Wood County Planning Commission, said he "envisioned" the project to open up the entire northern part of Wood County, making access to all areas of the county easier.

The I-75 interchange will also simplify travel for students using the turnpike to travel east to Cleveland or west towards Chicago, Miesmer said.

Construction on the interchanges is scheduled to begin this summer and end by the fall of 1990.

Russian prof to teach language, geography

by Jennifer Taday
staff reporter

A Moscow professor arriving at the University today will bring hands-on experience to the Russian department.

Liudmila Vupkova, professor of general linguistics at the University of Friendship of Peoples, will help teach three Russian language courses this semester, said Timothy Pogacar, director of the Soviet studies program.

In addition to teaching language classes, Vupkova will instruct a Soviet Union Today and Soviet geography course, lecture in University history classes and visit local city schools, Pogacar said.

"We will also organize meals in the dining halls where students, other than ones taking Russian, can eat dinner with Vupkova," Pogacar said.

Andrew Kerek, dean of the college of arts and sciences, said he hopes University students will gain firsthand knowledge of the Russian language and culture through Vupkova.

He said her expertise and insight will not only help students, but benefit the University.

Pogacar, assistant German and Russian professor, said he hopes to gain a valuable outside opinion of the teaching methods and curriculum in the University's Russian Department.

"Vupkova is an invaluable resource with suggestions, evaluations, and models for instruction for the University programs," Kerek said.

He said it is advantageous to the University to host a professor from another country.

Vupkova's visit is sponsored by the American Council of Teachers of the United States and Soviet Curriculum, Pogacar said.

Chemical fire burns four

PAINESVILLE (AP) — An explosion Thursday at a chemical plant injured several people and prompted engines from seven fire departments to be sent to the scene, authorities said.

Fire officials said they didn't immediately know the cause of the 11 a.m. explosion at Ricerca Inc.

Officials said there were no fatalities but four employees who worked at the plant suffered flash burns and were taken to Lake East Hospital in Painesville. Others were treated for minor injuries at the scene, authorities said.

Mentor Fire Chief John Preuer says there were at least three hazardous materials involved in the fire. It was not immediately known what the materials were.

Sport bylaw unfair, needs re-evaluation

The Southeastern Athletic Conference had good intentions when it proposed Proposition 42 at the NCAA Convention in San Francisco last week.

But the road to hell is paved with good intentions. Under the current NCAA bylaws, Proposition 48, student athletes are eligible for scholarships if they meet part of the standards set by the association. However, they must sit out their first year in order to prove themselves academically.

When Proposition 42 takes effect in August 1990, freshmen will be ineligible for any type of scholarship unless they meet all of the NCAA requirements. These requirements include a minimum score of 15 on the ACT or 700 on the SAT plus a minimum 2.0 grade point average in high school.

Although these standards do not seem rigid and may be motivation to students uninterested in academics, the system has several flaws.

Supporters of Proposition 42 fail to realize that 90 percent of the students affected are black — most from inner cities. The Proposition will deny students from low-income families the opportunity to escape the boundaries of the often inadequate city high schools and prove themselves in a more academic setting.

Many times poor black student athletes are unable to pass the entrance exams — but that is not because they are unintelligent. The tests themselves are biased. For example, if one of the questions on the test were to read "lid is to container as cup is to ..." the answers would be either saucer or table. But poor people do not have saucers under their coffee cups and would not be able to recognize "saucer" as the correct answer.

In fact statistics from the 1988 ACT test reveal that black students scored six points lower. On the SAT, blacks do somewhat better, but still score an average of 198 points lower.

Many oppose both Propositions for these very reasons — they are tainted with racism.

College is a place for bettering an individual in more than just academics. Athletics teaches leadership, interaction and discipline. If given the opportunity, this kind of education will be beneficial in finding and keeping a job later in life.

Also, everyone cannot be expected to be academically oriented. Although some athletes may be talented enough to play professional sports, they might not be eligible for drafts without first competing at the intercollegiate level.

And colleges need athletes — strong athletic programs bring in big bucks. Denying athletes the opportunity to at least try to pass their courses while contributing to a team that draws large numbers of spectators can only be considered a loss for both the students and the schools.

In January 1990 the NCAA will meet again, and we suggest they reconsider their decision. Perhaps they should put their efforts into supporting a different type of change — revising the SAT and ACT tests.

CRAIG HERGERT "OUT OF WHACK"

B-day haunts moose, doll

A couple of weeks ago, I read in USA Today that both the Barbie doll and Bullwinkle the Moose will be turning 30 this year. I think it's only fitting that they celebrate together.

Setting: A dark corner of a modest restaurant in Frostbite Falls, Minnesota. Seated together at a candlelit table is an unlikely couple: a breathtaking blonde and a huge, fully antlered bull moose. A bottle of champagne cools in a bowl of ice.

Barbie: I just can't get over what a charming place you have, Bullie!

Bullwinkle: Well, it keeps food on the table for me, I'll say that much for it. And business is bound to pick up, now that a celebrity of your status has been here. Thanks for coming.

Barbie: Hey, I had to get away from New York during this 30th birthday hoopla. I mean, the media is getting out of hand. Did you know I've had offers from Phil, Morton and Dr. Ruth?

Bullwinkle: No kidding!?

Barbie: Honest! I can just imagine what she'd ask me: "Being made of bendable material must be a great advantage. What position is your favorite?"

Bullwinkle: Yeah, I wouldn't put it past her. She had me on, you know.

Barbie: You're kidding! What did she ask you?

Bullwinkle: Really personal stuff. That fling I had with Bambi's mother for starters.

Barbie: That's really tasteless! Well, she won't get me there. (Looks around the restaurant.) Say, how long have you had this place?

Bullwinkle: Ever since my show got cancelled. (He takes a hunk of ice, pops it in his mouth, and chews.)

Barbie: You still haven't gotten over that, have you, big guy?

Bullwinkle: On a few stations, sure. But it's on at odd hours, and the stations constantly bump it at the last minute with one of those half-hour commercials. You know the kind: "You Can Get Stinking Rich in 15 Minutes." That sort of thing.

Barbie: (Polishing her gold bracelet) Hey, don't knock those things until you've tried them.

Bullwinkle: You mean?

Barbie: Sure! How do you think I went from having no more accessories than a cement-headed boyfriend and a beach towel to having a Corvette, a gym, and a jacuzzi? Hadn't you noticed how I've changed?

Bullwinkle: So that's how you did it? I'll be doggoned!

Barbie: You still say the cutest things.

Bullwinkle: Well, after years and years of that kind of dialogue, it's a matter of reflex. Old habits are hard to break. Practically once a week I catch myself doing that old hat trick.

Barbie: You mean the one where you try and pull a rabbit out of the hat?

Bullwinkle: (Smiling) "Button up my sleeve!"

Barbie: Did you ever get it to work?

Bullwinkle: No, but I've come close. Last week I pulled out a hamster.

Barbie: (Laughing brightly) That's better than a lion, a tiger and a rhino!

Bullwinkle: Safer, too!

Barbie: Have you pulled Rocky out recently?

Bullwinkle: (Looking hurt) Barbie, I thought you'd heard.

Barbie: You mean?

Bullwinkle: That's him over on the wall there. Roadkill. I had him stuffed. I figured he'd have wanted it that way.

Barbie: Roadkill? I thought he was a fly-squirrel!

Bullwinkle: Well, he was, but he used to go on long walks to try to sort out his head. He couldn't go on long flights for that. Too dangerous after all those air traffic controllers got the axe.

Barbie: And yet...

Bullwinkle: (Nodding) Gary Busey hit him with his chopper. It was part of that same big accident. It was in all the papers.

Barbie: I didn't see any mention of Rocky, though!

Bullwinkle: The Enquirer was the only paper that covered it. And nobody believed em. The boy who cried wolf, you know?

Barbie: Oh Bully, I'm so sorry!

Bullwinkle: Oh, that's OK, kid. I'm getting over it. Anyway, tonight was supposed to be a happy night.

Barbie: (Leaning forward) It still can be.

Bullwinkle: Boy, you have changed!

Barbie: Happy 30th, big guy.

Bullwinkle: Happy 30th, yourself, kiddo.

(They toast.)

Hergert, an instructor in English from Slayton, Minn., is a columnist for The News. He watched "The Bullwinkle Show" regularly as a youth, but swears he never had a Barbie doll.

Bush style not endearing

Welcome to George Bush's America! Today at noon, George Bush and Dan Quayle will be inaugurated as president and vice president of the United States. This alone is a rather sobering thought, however, I am further inclined to ask — how on earth could this have happened? (The election of these two men, that is.) Some things about George and Dan have puzzled me. I'd like to investigate these in an effort to find an answer to a question that has been on my mind ever since the election. Why?

The Dynamic Duo of George and Dan, hereafter referred to as PE and the Airhead, absolutely amazed me by their victory in the election. Out of fairness to the readers, I'll explain my characterizations. PE indicates political expedience. George is political expedience personified. As for Airhead, I am inclined to believe that this term is fairly self-explanatory.

Webster's Dictionary defines expedience as: Tending to promote the object proposed; advantageous; a means to an end. Look at this definition, then look at the political career of PE. Remarkably similar, aren't they? It has been made crystal clear that PE doesn't exactly find a great deal of merit in taking a stand on an issue and sticking to it as a matter of principle. Let's be honest, PE has changed his mind on issues more often than the wind changes direction in Bowling Green.

This style of politics is not exactly new to PE either. Ever since he has become relatively famous because of his run for the presidency in 1980, he has been busy changing his mind for political gain. At one time he supported the Equal Rights Amendment and now the mere thought of equal protection under the law for 52 percent of the population is reprehensible to PE. At one time he supported

Thank you, Mr. Reagan

Well, it's finally arrived: the Reagan presidency is over. Naturally, just about everyone wants to know how history will view the 40th President of the United States, including the old "Great Communicator" himself. If you watched his Farewell Address to the nation on January 11, he waxed eloquently on his accomplishments and never touched on some of his notable failures. I'd like to give a more balanced view about his Presidency by looking at some major achievements, and some glaring mistakes.

Although this country has experienced what may have been the most prosperous peacetime expansion of our economy in terms of jobs, economic recovery and the like, I'd like to know how we're going to pay for it. The Republicans constantly talk of "Morning in America" yet fail to relate what happens after lunch. Most worrisome is the budget deficit, which is a result of government spending more than they collect in tax revenues. The current budget deficit is estimated at $155 billion. To be fair, the Democrats haven't proposed any workable solutions either. The truth is, no one really knows how to solve this unwieldy problem. It is one of Reagan's most glaring failures.

The terms "Teflon President" and "Gipergate" will be intimately associated in regards to President Reagan's ability to escape blame for the Iran-Contra affair. Did Reagan's early training as an actor (he is the first President to have come from that profession) have something to do with it? Was his age a factor in avoiding blame?

Another big failure is the one which cost the lives of the 243 Marines stationed in Lebanon in October of 1983 during a terrorist attack on the compound.

Before anyone accuses me of being too hard on him, let me tell you about some of the good things he's done. I think his greatest accomplishment has been the restoration of pride in America. That probably sounds corny, but look at where we were prior to his arrival: The Vietnam War and "social dislocation" that accompanied it were bothering many Americans. Confidence in government due to the Watergate Scandal that forced Nixon from power was also on a lot of people's minds. After President Nixon's public humiliation, we had two ineffectual Presidents, one of which was never elected to that position (Ford). President Jimmy Carter figured out how to start the peace process in the Middle East and was OK on social issues, but didn't know a lot about economics. The climate was ripe for change.

Throw into this environment one successful actor who rewrites some laws and we have the most successful peacetime economic expansion in history. Did "the Gipper" stumble onto a successful formula for remaining popular during one's presidency by being aloof from the day-to-day operations of his government to the extent that his achievement is the missile reduction treaty he signed with the Soviet Union in 1987? However, that particular accomplishment has as much to do with the developments within the U.S.S.R. as with the involvement of the President.

In spite of all the ups and downs, I feel that Ronald Reagan was the right president at the right time. As the times change, or perhaps more appropriately, as people's attitudes and concerns change, so must the president. And so, as Reagan rides off into retirement and sunny southern California on January 20, 1989, I wish him well.

Another round in the raging Bengals debate

Concerning the recent commentary by Don Hensley on those beloved Bengals: Don, why must you take out your disappointment at the Browns' season on a team that has shown all Ohio how not to blow your chance at the big one by giving up a 98-yard TD drive in the closing moments on your own field, or by fumbling the game away at the team's goal line?

A few comments about your column. I wouldn't call it bandwagoning when one has been a season ticket holder for the past 20 years. It's really amazing how tough it is to get a ticket anywhere when a team is winning. I'm just sure you cheered like heck when Mike Phipps led the Browns to all of those championship years back in the 1970s.

The correct origin of "who dey" was in 1981, well before that of the New Orleans' chant. Browns' fans have no room to talk when it comes to chants. Who wears dog (notice the correct spelling) masks, barks and throws and eats dog biscuits?

I promise you the Bengals' defense will be the winning margin in this Super Bowl that has one Ohio team playing while the other is out looking for a coach. WHO — DEY!!!

Advice to new president

Dear Mr. President,
Your administration will face many challenges over the course of the next four years. The experience I gained while working in Washington and closely soaking in the work of the United States Senate prompts me to share some concerns and some common sense approaches to them.

One of the growing concerns of our age is the depletion of our environment. Our waters, forests and atmosphere are showing the signs of thousands of years of human intervention. International cooperation and new waste disposal methods are essential in correcting this situation.

In the economy, I join Senator Richard Lugar of Indiana in calling for an Economic Council in your administration, equal in power and prominence to the National Security Council with the sole intent of reducing the deficit. You must also select and work with an aggressive Trade Representative. Current trends in the European market show a phasing out of American goods and a foreign trade debt because of unfair trading practices. Aggressive diplomacy and hard competitiveness are needed to maintain our market power in the world.

You, Mr. President, must continue to support freedom fighters around the world. There are many who say that the spread of communism is not as important as our domestic issues. However valid their arguments were in previous times, they do not understand the situation today. They do not understand that the brave men and women who oppose communist authoritarian regimes fight for our freedom on their shores, in place of our American men and women on our own. These people keep constant pressure on these governments to reform and are valuable tools. Continue to support and encourage them.

Terrorism is one of the more recent threats to the United States. You must make it clear that it is your policy, Mr. President, not to negotiate with terrorists, despite inevitable short-term suffering and opposition. Any compassion toward terrorists can easily be perceived as weakness on your part and will lead to more terrorist acts. You and your allies must devise tougher methods of retaliation and use them.

The importance of a strong defense for our nations is paramount. The reason we have peace today is because of our military credibility and capability to retaliate. On any given day during the Carter administration, our armed forces were plagued by ships that couldn't leave port and planes that could not fly due to lack of parts and inefficiency. Today, our military is back and riding high and is respected again. Do not deal away such powerful bargaining chips as SDI or our presence in Western Europe.

It must continue to be the policy of the United States to oppose dictatorships of both the left and the right. You must take the lead and encourage and assist in the establishment of democratic nations with free elections, as well as human and civil rights. Our involvement in the observation of the free elections in the Philippines in 1986 and in Guatemala are good examples of how the United States can ensure the preservation of personal dignity, freedom, and democratic values of all people around the world. The number of new democracies sprouting up in the Americas and the Pacific Rim are promising and you, Mr. President, must continue to support such a movement.

Finally, Mr. President, seek the bipartisan support of the United States Congress. While this may be often frustrating and even unsuccessful, the power of a United States that speaks with one voice is tremendous. Keep in touch with Congressional leaders and committee chairs and use them as a salesman of your policies in Capitol Hill. The result will be great respect and support for you by the legislatures.

This is, by all means, a very brief selection of challenges you will face. But a common-sense approach to implementing your policies and leading the free world will greatly benefit you and the people you have been chosen to lead. I will have the pleasure of observing how you go about this next summer if my candidacy for a job on your White House staff is successful. The Reagan Revolution continues with you, Mr. President, and your decisions and actions over the next four years will leave a lasting effect for generations to come.

Vanzant

The option to have a legal abortion and now he seems to feel that the government, in its infinite wisdom, should retain the right to make this decision. Maybe BIG BROTHER isn't too far off after all? These are two of the more glaring examples in PE's past but even more can be observed from the campaign recently passed.

The environment is an issue of interest. PE claimed, during the campaign, that he was an environmentalist. This is quite interesting, considering that he was vice president in an administration that will go down in history as the worst for environmental protection. Vetoes of important legislation, like the Clean Water Act, and the appointment of such detestable figures as James Watt and Ann Gorsuch (the Bonnie and Clyde of environmental protection, as Lloyd Bentsen put it.) It would seem that an environmentalist would have raised objections to these sorts of indecencies, but PE didn't because he's Political Expedience. Willie Horton is another example. For a while there, it appeared that Willie Horton was running for vice president with PE. You remember him, the man who escaped while on furlough and stabbed a Maryland man and raped his wife. This was a centerpiece of PE's campaign. That's it, PE, repeatedly ram this fact down the people's throats while conveniently forgetting that while you were vice president, federal prisoners escaped and committed murder while on furlough. Also forget about the fact that some halfway houses in Texas with which you were connected resulted in the death of a minister due to an escape. Forget about these facts, PE, because we all know that you have to remain Political Expedience.

It is pleasing to know that some things do not change with the passage of time. The sun still rises in the east and sets in the west. The planets still revolve around the sun and the new vice president is still an Airhead.

Ever since the election, I've watched the Airhead when I could, and especially when he gives interviews on television. Some advice to the new administration: shut this man up! He might give you away. If stupid could be personified, I'm sure the image would come fairly close to that of the Airhead.

The Airhead has participated in several interviews since the election. During these he has said some things that, to the average viewer, I'm sure, would provoke the feeling that "This man is an Airhead." Some of the more remarkable things that he has said include the following: When asked what he would do after his inauguration, he replied, "I'm gonna be Vice President." What an Airhead! When asked what some of his responsibilities would include, he replied, "I expect to spend a few hours a day on Capitol Hill." I would like to congratulate the Airhead. It seems as though he at least knows that he is expected to work in Washington D.C. Finally, another responsibility that he cited was, "I'm gonna be head of the Space Council." This would serve to be a legitimate responsibility of all the youthful exuberance of an 11-year-old on his way to NASA Space Camp. Is that where the Airhead will be sent for his training?

Congratulations to PE and the Airhead. I hope you enjoy these next four years, because I cannot envision the people giving you four more. It may take a while, but the people are bound to find out that the new president is Political Expedience, and that the new vice president is an Airhead. And no matter where they go and what they do, they will always remain PE and Airhead.

Vanzant, from Cleveland, is President of the Campus Democrats.

MAC officials differ on Prop 42

by Andy Woodard
assistant managing editor

Two Mid-American Conference athletic officials said Thursday the NCAA should continue to stress academics more than athletics.

Paul Amodio, Kent State Athletic Director, and Walt Schneider, Associate Athletic Director at Central Michigan, said Proposition 42 will do that.

Proposition 42, the controversial new NCAA by-law which denies scholarships to freshmen who do not meet certain academic standards, will go into effect Aug. 1, 1990.

"Kent State supports the efforts by the NCAA to emphasize excellence in intercollegiate athletics," Amodio said.

Schneider said the current

academic requirements for athletes should be more strict.

"At Central Michigan, we have students who far and away meet the (entrance) standards and struggle (academically), nonetheless," he said. "If they can't make it through Central, I don't see these athletes coming close to passing unless we compromise our standards."

Kent State, Central Michigan and Ohio University were the only three MAC schools to vote for the issue at the NCAA Convention in San Francisco last week.

Ohio University officials were not available for comment.

The other six MAC schools — Toledo, Ball State, Miami University, Eastern Michigan, Western Michigan and Bowling Green — voted against Proposition 42, which will amend Proposition 48.

Proposition 48 requires freshmen to score a minimum of 700 on the SAT or 15 on the ACT, plus have a 2.0 grade point average in high school, to be eligible to compete in intercollegiate athletics.

Freshmen who meet part of the standards must sit out their first year, although they are still eligible for a scholarship.

Toledo Associate Athletic Director Tim Selgo said Proposition 42 should not have been passed.

"Our feeling here is that it's taking away an opportunity for the kids and we're not sure that's right," Selgo said Thursday.

Instead, he said the format of the ACT and SAT tests should be changed.

"You have to think the test scores are related to Proposition 48," he said. "Students from better backgrounds certainly do better on the tests."

"A lot of Proposition 48s have good grade point averages. That's why we think it's tough to limit financial aid just because they didn't score well on the tests."

Although many conferences in the NCAA heavily recruit student athletes who are marginal academically, a study shows the MAC does not.

Six MAC schools surveyed Wednesday had a combined total of 24 Proposition 48 casualties since 1986, when it first went into effect.

Figures were unavailable for Kent State, Eastern Michigan and Western Michigan, but Kent State sports information director John Wagner said his school had totaled "no more than 10."

"Proposition 48 is really not much of a factor in the MAC," said Don Purvis, Ball State Athletic Director. "Nobody's taking 15 a year and stock-piling them."

"Sure, everybody has one or two projects per year, but MAC history indicates we do nothing but that."

However, Central Michigan will not settle for marginal athletes, Schneider said.

"Our admissions people have turned down people with 2.7 and 2.8 grade point averages," he said. "So what claim does everyone have that someone with a 2.0 should be allowed to come to a university on a scholarship?"

Much of the clamor over Proposition 42 started with John Thompson, Georgetown University's head basketball coach.

More than 1,800 incoming freshmen have been Proposition 48 casualties since 1986 and 90 percent have been black. Thompson has boycotted the last two Georgetown games in protest of the new by-law, which will mostly affect blacks.

"I'm not biased," Schneider said, "but I feel it would be immoral if we let (partial qualifiers) into the universities."

Choices debated

Profs share opinions on Bush's cabinet

by Fred Wright
staff reporter

University political science professors share varied opinions on President-elect George Bush's newly appointed cabinet.

Dennis Anderson, associate professor of political science, said the new cabinet is within the mainstream of conservative American politics.

"It resembles Nixon's and Ford's cabinets more in that it has a lot fewer true believing conservatives than Reagan's cabinet," he said. "The holdovers from Reagan's administration are also the less ideological members of his cabinet."

According to Kendall Stiles, assistant professor of political science, Bush made a "deplorable" decision choosing Jack Kemp for the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development position.

Kemp sends a message of non-interest on behalf of the Bush administration toward the poor, Stiles said.

Bush made an interesting move choosing the former Secretary of Education, William J. Bennett, as the new "Drug Czar," Skiles said.

He said democrats believe Bennett is insensitive to minority needs, but possesses a tough exterior and a quick mind for the job, which entails coordinating efforts to stop the sale and abuse of illegal drugs.

Although Bush's cabinet is more practical than his predecessor's, it is still a "rich, white male clique" with few women and minorities, Stiles said.

"I think this cabinet is better than Reagan's cabinet but it's not going to provide progress," he said.

John Merriam, associate professor of political science, said he thinks James Baker will bring flexibility and adaptability to foreign relations and global economics in his new position as Secretary of State.

Merriam said he is also confident in William K. Reilly as the new director of the Environmental Protection Agency.

"(Reilly) is a long term environmentalist and it is encouraging to have an environmentalist as the director of the E.P.A.," he said.

He said the new Secretary of Interior, Manuel Lujan, worries him because he wants to open up the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge for the oil reserves there.

"He's moving in the opposite direction from the new E.P.A. director. Exploitation versus Conservation," he said.

Overall, he said the cabinet is keeping within Bush's outlook.

Auto pollutant effects worsen

by Shelley Banks
staff reporter

Until researchers decide to tackle the problem of automobile pollution from a different angle, the situation will worsen, according to one University of Michigan professor.

Assisted by the Office of Technology in Washington D.C., Professor of Physics Marc Ross recently completed a study on the effects of automobile emissions on the environment.

In his speech at the University Wednesday night, Ross said people with breathing problems who live in urban areas experience heightened difficulties. This is because they are exposed to more automobile exhaust than the average person.

Both people and cars contribute to the growing pollution problem, Ross said.

"The older a car gets, the higher the amount of hydrocarbons, sulfur dioxide and carbon dioxide escapes into the atmosphere, because of the deterioration of the catalytic converter," Ross said.

The purpose of a catalytic converter is to screen out the amount of sulfur released into the air.

He said cars should be made that prevent dangerous emissions from escaping into the atmosphere.

However, because some emissions evaporate when cars are filled with gasoline, this proposal may be ineffective, he said.

He said pollution problems persist because a growing number of students and professors drive to school and an increasing number of people commute to jobs.

Ross said his goal is to "investigate how much we can improve the automobile to make it efficient," and help alleviate these problems.

According to Ross, some people believe public transportation saves energy and reduces air pollution, but putting energy-efficient cars on the road may be a more feasible solution.

He said the pollution problem has escalated to the extent that he believes "we are preparing ourselves for a fall."

Service 'lines up' additions

by Ivan Groger
staff reporter

In order to alleviate busy signals and connect more people to Campus Fact Line operators, the service has installed additional lines.

Last semester Fact Line received more than 85,000 phone calls, averaging 800 to 900 calls per day, said Gardner McLean, associate director of public relations.

McLean said the University has increased the Fact Line budget enabling the service to add two telephone lines and accommodate the large number of callers.

Although Fact Line had four lines and two operators in the late 1970s and early 1980s, state-wide cutbacks at the University level affected Fact Line's budget.

The result was the loss of two lines and reduced operation hours, McLean said.

Although those lines were restored this fall when Fact Line's budget was increased, full use of the lines is limited, he said.

Previously, Fact Line had one operator monitoring two phones. This system was upgraded on a trial basis this fall when another operator was hired to monitor the additional phones at various times of the day, McLean said.

This semester, the new system will be in effect for three hours each weekday.

He said a "significant budget increase" would be needed to consistently maintain two operators and four lines.

Pamela Kirkendall, Fact Line operator, said the job is more efficient when "two brains are working instead of one."

"Having four lines going, you're going to get a lot more callers through," Kirkendall said.

Fact Line is now open from 10 a.m. until midnight during the week and from noon until midnight on weekends. The service currently employs 11 operators, McLean said.

Gillmor

gressional committee appointments. Gillmor was selected to serve on the House Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs one of the most sought-after committee appointments, he said.

In addition, Gillmor was awarded a seat on the Committee on House Administration.

While most committees will not meet until next week, Gillmor said the banking and finance committee met on the day of his appointment.

Gillmor said the transition from Ohio Senate president — a position he held for three terms — to a freshman U.S. Congressman was not a difficult one to make.

Gillmor replaces 15-term Congressman Delbert Latta of Bowling Green, who announced his retirement in January 1988.

According to Capitol Hill tradition, Gillmor is to use Latta's office equipment for his first month in office.

However, this tradition has created problems, he said.

Latta was one of 15 of the 435 members of Congress who did not use computers in his office.

Gillmor said his own computer will arrive on Feb. 4, which will relieve back-ups in correspondence and communication created by lack of equipment.

Two meets await Falcon tankers

by Mike Drabenstott
sports reporter

The Bowling Green swim teams have a "crystal ball" weekend ahead of them as they enter a dual meet with Ohio University today and the All-Ohio Invitational Saturday.

For the Falcon men, the meets offer a chance to gauge their progress-to-date toward the season ending Mid-American Conference Championship showdown with leader Eastern Michigan.

Says OU head coach Scott Hammond: "(BG head coach) Brian Gordon is doing a great job with his men's program to win the conference championship."

For the Falcon women, the weekend gives a look ahead to what could be a change in Miami's seven-year stronghold on the conference championship.

"OU has the strongest and deepest women's team since the formation of MAC swimming," said Brian Gordon.

Gordon will undoubtedly have his troops ready for the challenge the two-day showdown in Athens will provide.

"To win either meet (men or women) against Ohio U., we must swim our best meet of the year, and that still might not guarantee our winning," Gordon said. "It's a chance for us to lay it on the line."

The men have not lost since a Nov. 19 defeat to Eastern Michigan, while the women's last loss occurred Nov. 12 against Cleveland State.

The Bobcat women, despite finishing second to BG by two points in last year's MAC meet, hope to "turn the tables a little from last year," OU's Hammond said. But to do so will require their challenging of Shari Williams and Andrea Szekely, who Hammond called "one of the class swimmers in the history of the conference."

Meanwhile, the OU men have not lost to the Falcons during the three-year Hammond regime. Top Falcons Rich Foster, Brian Dickman, and Michael Poindexter should again be the main forces for BG.

Although Saturday's Invitational, which features 250 swimmers from most of the schools in Ohio, may seem more important because of the number of teams, Gordon and Hammond said they are placing an emphasis on the dual meet. Both coaches cited the importance of a head-to-head matchup as the reason.

Falcons play host to Broncos

WHO: Bowling Green Falcons versus Western Michigan Broncos

WHEN: Tomorrow at 11:45 a.m.

WHERE: BG's Anderson Arena.

RECORDS: BG enters tomorrow's contest with a record of 12-3 overall and 4-0 in the Mid-American Conference. The Falcons have won five straight, including defeating the Miami Redskins 65-64 Wednesday night, which put them into first place in the MAC. The Broncos are 7-7 overall and 3-2 in the MAC after a 68-58 overtime win over Central Michigan last Wednesday. The win gave WMU sole position of fourth place in the MAC.

SERIES: WMU leads the series with BG 9-7. Last year, the Falcons went 2-1 against the Broncos. The loss to WMU in Anderson Arena was one of BG's two losses in the MAC last year.

COACHES: Jim Hess is in his seventh year as WMU head coach. He has compiled a record of 90-87 during his tenure. Fran Voll is in his fifth season as the Falcon head coach and has guided his teams to a record of 104-81 and two consecutive NCAA tournaments.

PROBABLE STARTERS: WESTERN MICHIGAN: Kim Barrier...5-foot-9, forward (12.4 points per game/ 4.4 rebounds per game). Marti Davis...5-5, guard (4.2 ppg/ 2.6 rpg). Diane DeSantis...5-11, forward (12.2 ppg/ 8.6 rpg). Cathie Voe...6-0, forward (6.3 ppg/ 5.4 rpg). Ruthanne Wisniewski...5-9, guard (15.0 ppg/ 3.0 rpg).

BOWLING GREEN: Angie Bonner...6-2, center (13.7 points per game/ 8.6 rebounds per game). Tecca Thompson...5-10, forward (7.5 ppg/ 4.3 rpg). Paulette Backstrom...5-4 guard (8.3 ppg/ 4.1 rpg). Traci Gorman...6-0, forward (6.5 ppg/ 3.9 rpg). Megan McGuire...6-1, guard (13.5 ppg/ 4.3 rpg).

WESTERN MICHIGAN NOTES: The Broncos, statistically speaking, should not pose much of a threat for the Falcons. For the season, WMU has shot only 44.5 percent from the field and a dismal 55.4 percent from the free-throw line. They have also had foul trouble from Voe, who may have center Missy O'Mara taking over her starting position. Prior to Wednesday, WMU was ranked eighth in the MAC in offense (62.5 ppg) and fourth in defense (69.2). However, the Broncos have two players that can make the three-point shot—consistently. As a team WMU has shot 33.9 percent from three-point range. Wisniewski has hit 22-59 from that range for 38.5 percent, while Jenny Malinowski has sunk 17 of 46 for 36.9 percent.

BOWLING GREEN NOTES: The Falcons will be without the services of forward Jackie Motycka for this contest, who injured her ankle against Miami. However, BG, with its height advantage over WMU, should still be able to score as many points, block as many shots and grab as many rebounds. They also have Backstrom in the back-court, who has been averaging 6.2 assists per contest. Prior to Wednesday's contest, the Falcons were boasting a second-ranked MAC offense which scored an average of 79.5 points per game, and a third-ranked MAC defense which has only allowed an average of 61.3 points per game.

Motycka sidelined

Bowling Green basketball's all-time leading scorer Jackie Motycka will be taking a short rest from sinking baskets.

Motycka left the Miami game Wednesday night with 14:37 remaining, due to an injury to her right ankle.

Falcon head coach Fran Voll said that a broken ankle had been ruled out by doctors, but the extent of the injury was not positive.

"She will definitely not be playing against Western (Michigan)," Voll said. "It is looking to be about 10 days or so before she will be back."

The injury to Motycka marks the first time in her four-year career that she has sustained an injury serious enough to keep her from taking the court.

Prior to the Miami game, Motycka led the team in scoring with an average of 16.9 points per game. She also led the team in free-throw shooting with 89.1 percent.

BG looks to get offense rolling

The Bowling Green men's basketball team will attempt to get their offense back into gear Saturday afternoon against the Western Michigan Broncos in Anderson Arena.

The Falcons, who shot a meager 27.8 percent from the field in Wednesday night's 65-42 loss at Miami, have averaged just 52 points in their last nine contests. BG is 6-9 overall, 0-4 in MAC play, while the Broncos roll into town with an 8-6 record, 3-2 in the MAC.

WMU head coach Vernon Payne, in his seventh year at the helm, possesses a solid cast of players returning from last year's 12-17 squad.

Eli Parker, a 6-5 transfer from Iowa State who averaged 14.4 points per game last year to rank 10th in the MAC in scoring, is a big cog in the offense again this season. Mark Brown, a 6-0 sophomore, is also in his second year in the Bronco program. Last season, the transfer from Michigan State ranked fifth in the MAC in scoring with a 19.6 ppg average.

The Falcons enter tomorrow's 2 p.m. contest with guard Joe Gregory leading in scoring with a 14 ppg. average. Lamont Pippen (11.7 ppg), Darrell McLane (10.2 ppg) and Billy Johnson (8.9 ppg) round out BG's leading scorers. Sophomore Ed Colbert, averaging 6.3 rebounds per game, leads BG in that category.

Blake triggers Falcon power play

Sophomore defenseman proves valuable on offense and defense

by Don Hensley
assistant sports editor

Ready...aim...fire.

No, it's not a command from an American fighter pilot circling Libya, but the start of a successful Bowling Green power play.

Rob Blake, the triggerman who shoots like he has a howitzer packed away in the hollowing of his hockey stick, is the man who does most of the firing from the point for the Icercs.

"Rob might shoot the puck harder than anyone in our conference," BG head coach Jerry York said. "He and (Don) Gibson from Michigan State, both of them can really fire the puck."

This fact has never been more evident than this season. The reason behind this is as simple as the transition from freshman to sophomore.

"I've always had the opportunity to shoot the puck from the point," Blake said. "The difference between this year and last year is that I have more confidence in my shot. This year, I'm holding the puck longer."

But to think of Blake as being solely a goal-scorer is a misconception. After all, last year he made his mark in the Central Collegiate Hockey Association as a solid, physical defenseman. This was made evident by his scoring as he tallied 13 points all season, with five of them coming on goals.

This year, however, the Simcoe, Ontario native has been a consistent name among the scoring leaders for the Falcons, and along with Kevin Dahl, anchors the scoring from the blue-line with 21 points in 27 games.

Blake had a four-game goal scoring streak snapped against Michigan on Saturday. His seven goals lead all Falcon defensemen.

"His shooting ability is more evident this year because he gets it (his shot) off," York said. "The reason is, he's getting space on his shots, which is allowing him to get six or seven a game."

Goal-scoring isn't the only thing Blake (6'3", 215 pounds) is known for around the BG Ice Arena, however. It's not often that a successful goal-scorer also leads the team in penalty minutes (90), which is the case with him.

But even so, York feels his talented sophomore has made strides in controlling his penalties.

"He has been able to avoid a lot of unnecessary penalties after the whistle this year," York said. "Last year, he was a little short-tempered, but this year he has really played under control."

Blake, a sport management major, has also played a major role in introducing the two freshmen defensemen, Derek Hopko and Otis Plageman, to the BG system.

Although he is only a sophomore, at times he plays and acts like a senior, and this is the point fellow defenseman Dahl made.

"One of the big things Rob does for the team is that he is a leader, even though he is only a sophomore," he said. "He has had a great influence on the younger players this season."

Blake started playing hockey in Simcoe at a young age because his father Robert and his older brother both played hockey. He played junior hockey with Stratford and it was there that he decided to attend BG.

"I really wasn't recruited by any other colleges," he said. "A lot of the guys I met at Stratford

Bowling Green sophomore Rob Blake moves past two Michigan-Dearborn defenders in a recent game. Blake will hope to do the same this weekend when the Falcons battle first-place Michigan State in a home

Courtesy the Key/Brad Phalin and home series, which starts in East Lansing on Friday. Both games start at 7:30.

came here, so that's why I wanted to play here."

With his solid performance as a freshman, Blake was drafted last season by the Los Angeles Kings. Although being drafted early in one's college career may add to the pressure for some players, Blake sees it as just the opposite.

"Getting drafted my freshman year was quite a confidence builder," he said. "It relieves a little bit of pressure because it's always in the back of your mind. But even though you're drafted, you still can't let up."

Letting up is the last thing the Falcons can do now. After suffering a sweep at the hands of Michigan, they will play first-place Michigan State this weekend, and as usual, the team is ready to play the Spartans.

"Michigan State is one series you've got to look forward to," Blake said.

ND player dies, cause unknown

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Notre Dame football player Bob Satterfield collapsed at a nightclub and died Thursday in a Niles, Mich., hospital, school officials said.

Satterfield, a senior who saw limited playing time during the 1988 season, had returned hours earlier from Washington, where the national champion Notre Dame team had met President Reagan at the White House.

A statement released by Notre Dame sports information director John Heisler said the cause of death had not been determined. The statement said Satterfield died at 3 a.m. at Pawating Hospital.

An autopsy was to be performed today by Dr. Fred Busse of the Berrien County, Mich., medical examiner's office.

"There was no hint at all that he was having physical or medical problems," said Heisler, who accompanied the team to Washington.

Satterfield was with defensive end Darrell "Flash" Gordon and tailback Mark Green when he collapsed at O'Tays Nite Club in Niles, about five miles north of the campus.

"He was feeling fine," Gordon said. "He had been dancing some earlier, but we were just sitting there at the table, just talking and joking, and all of a sudden he collapsed to the ground. It looked like he was having a seizure."

"When he collapsed, I looked around. I thought maybe someone had hit him. There wasn't much we could do."

Satterfield, 22, was a native of Los Angeles and played football at Notre Dame High School. He came to Notre Dame as a walk-on and was awarded an athletic scholarship last August. He was listed on the roster as a cornerback and appeared in two games in 1988, carrying twice as a running back for 9 yards.

Niles Township authorities said questions about Satterfield's death were being referred to Notre Dame. A secretary in the office of Athletic Director Richard Rosenthal said Rosenthal was in a meeting with Coach Lou Holtz late this morning.

Campus Comments

What is missing from dining and entertainment in Bowling Green?

Friday/John Potter

Greg Dickerson, senior criminal justice major: "There aren't enough dance bars. We need someplace in town where a person can go and dance and hang out, like the Flats in Cleveland."

Kim Horton, freshman nursing major: "There's not enough going on. We need places that are more oriented towards college students and people who are underage, like nightclubs or dance clubs."

Kevin Stahl, freshman business major: "We need a place with dancing girls, like a go-go bar. Also maybe a laundro-bar, someplace you can go to do your laundry and have a couple of beers while you're waiting"

Becky Mancuso-Schutt, graduate student, history: "We need more ethnic restaurants, like Greek, Chinese or Indian."

Nightspots offer options to drinking

by Roger McCoy and Linda Hoy

For underage students who are unable to patronize Bowling Green's bars, the campus has two non-alcoholic nightspots, Dry Dock and Quad Rock Cafe.

A third non-alcoholic alternative, Frank's Place, has closed its doors but is scheduled to re-open in February.

The non-alcoholic facilities give underage students a place to dance and socialize in a bar atmosphere, Ed O'Donnell, assistant director of food operations, said.

"The Dry Dock operation is very successful," O'Donnell said, adding that the non-alcoholic facilities do not make any profit for food operations.

Food operations supplies both Dry Dock and Quad Rock Cafe. Both nightclubs feature mocktails and snacks.

Bill Boy, president of Dry Dock, said Dry Dock has a budget of $11,000, most of which goes for booking bands.

The facility, located in the basement of Harshman Quadrangle, has about five bands each semester.

Dry Dock, open every Saturday from 9 p.m. to midnight, also features disc jockeys and comedians.

"Comedy night seemed to go over well," Boy said. "We plan on doing that again."

O'Donnell said about 300 to 500 students attend the Dry Dock each evening. "There is a large amount of participation (at Dry Dock)," O'Donnell said.

The attendance at Quad Rock Cafe is difficult to estimate because Zzas is connected to the facility and patrons may attend both places, O'Donnell said. Erik Strom, assistant complex coordinator of Founders Quadrangle, said the Quad Rock Cafe's attendance increases on nights that a band is scheduled.

About 150 people attend the cafe each night, he said.

A third non-alcoholic facility closed last semester due to lack of attendance. Frank's Place, which will reopen open under another name, is managed by the University Activities Organization.

Gale Swanka, director of UAO, said that the non-alcoholic concept can be successful with proper marketing and visibility.

"The major accomplishment was learning what we could do better," Swanka said.

O'Donnell said the Quad Rock Cafe lacks formal student organization which makes it more difficult to run. However, Strom said there is an effort among student groups to collect funds for the cafe.

"We are seeing more student involvement beyond Founders, and that is a good sign," he said.

The former Frank's Place, located in Prout Cafeteria, will have a preview night Feb. 3 and will officially re-open Feb. 10.

A guide for culinary explorers in BG

Choices among local sit-down restaurants range from casual to classy

Food

It's just another one of those days. The cafeteria is serving Cod On Bun again for the fourth time this week. Somehow, the same old greasy burger and fries at the local fast-food joint just doesn't have the same appeal. On top of all that, the Love Interest has just called and wants to eat dinner tonight. What to do? Panic? No. It just so happens that Bowling Green offers a wide variety of off-campus restaurant choices to the intrepid culinary explorer, with a wide range in prices and atmosphere from casually laid back to romantically classy.

Here then is a guide to some of the restaurants in BG, along with a basic idea in prices categorized as "inexpensive" which is in the under $5 range for the majority of the items on the menu, "moderate" which is for selections in the $5 to $10 range, and "expensive" which is $10 and up. Atmosphere is classed as "very casual," "casual" and "semi-formal/classy." Also included in the guide are mention of special features, such as live music, or certain food or drink specials. This is NOT a review of the restaurants, but merely a guide to inform about the choices in town.

■ Bentley's Bar and Grill (in the Holiday Inn) has moderate prices, a semi-formal atmosphere, and features a piano player in the lounge, Tuesday through Friday from 4:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m.

■ Cassidy's has moderate prices, classy atmosphere, and a DJ for the dance floor on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday nights. Drink specials ($2 Long Island Iced Tea) and food specials (all-you-can-eat chicken for $5.50 or ribs for $7.50 on Wednesday nights) are featured.

■ David's Deli has very inexpensive prices, a very casual atmosphere, and features take-out and delivery of their home-made food and desserts.

■ DiBenedetto's Sub-Me-Quick has inexpensive to moderate prices, a very casual atmosphere, and features carry-out and delivery of all their menu items.

■ Friendly's has inexpensive prices, a very casual, family-like atmosphere and features many ice cream specialties.

■ Godfrey's Family Restaurant has moderate prices, a family-style atmosphere, and features two dinner specials every day, along with serving breakfast all day long.

■ Kaufman's Downtown and At The Lodge features a wide price range from inexpensive to expensive, combines a casual and classy atmosphere, and features daily drink specials and food specials such as prime rib and seafood buffets, Sunday Brunch, and seafood specials, depending on the restaurant.

■ Myles' Pizza Pub features moderate prices, a very casual atmosphere, and features a delivery service. Food service is stressed more than drinking.

■ Padrone's has inexpensive prices, a casual atmosphere, and features all-you-can-eat and half price specials, as well as delivery (though not their specials).

■ Phoenix Palace has inexpensive to moderate prices, a very casual atmosphere, and features American and Chinese cuisine, as well as carryout and delivery.

■ Pollyeyes Campus has moderate prices, a decidedly student atmosphere, and features imported beers and live entertainment.

■ Polynesian Village has moderate prices, a very cozy atmosphere, and features lunch and dinner specials, as well as carryout and delivery.

■ Ponderosa has moderate prices, a casual atmosphere, and features the 80-item "Grand Buffet".

■ The Rib Shack has inexpensive to moderate prices, a quietly casual and rustic atmosphere, and as the name implies, they specialize in ribs.

■ Sam B's has moderate to expensive prices (the lunch specials are more inexpensive than dinner), a casually classy atmosphere, and features an extensive wine list.

■ Stinger's Cafe has moderate prices, a comfortable yet classy atmosphere, and features numerous specials and live music on Wednesday nights.

■ Sundance has an inexpensive menu, very casual decor and atmosphere, and features $1.50 Margarita specials, as well as serving late into the night.

This list is not comprehensive. It will be noticed that the local fast-food restaurants, pizza parlors and bars are not mentioned. This is only a guide to some of the many sit-down restaurants in Bowling Green.

Big Boy's changing face a burger-lover favorite

by Jim Tinker

Everybody is familiar with the big kid on the block.

He's over 50 years old, and aside from a perpetual weight problem and questionable fashion choices, he looks better than ever.

The Big Boy has stood since 1937 as the silent sentinel and champion of the double-deck hamburger as a representative of the Big Boy Family Restaurants which bear his name.

Big Boy was born in Glendale, California, the offspring of a restaurant owner, a hamburger and customer creativity, according to a designer of Big Boy statues and the creator of the Big Boy comics, Manfred Bernhard.

Bob Wyman owned a 10-seat shack of a restaurant in Glendale and was the only employee. A lot of entertainment people stopped in and told Bob he should come up with something different than the typical hamburger that everybody served, Bernhard said.

Bernhard said the restaurant owner went into his kitchen and sliced a bun in half, added another meat patty, spread on some special sauce and, "that's how the double-deck hamburger was born."

The new hamburger was an immediate success, Bernhard said.

One day a regular customer who was an illustrator for Looney Toons sketched a drawing of another regular customer — a chubby lad in checkered overalls.

Thus the Big Boy was born.

Wyman's restaurant eventually turned into a national franchise and across the nation a beaming Big Boy, hoisting a hamburger on a platter, greeted customers to the restaurants, Bernhard said.

Like everyone else, the Big Boy's appearance has changed over time.

Bernhard, who has designed the Big Boy statues since 1954, has seen the rotund representative metamorphose from a country bumpkin munching a hamburger to today's slick symbol without the burger.

Concerning Big Boy and the restaurants, Bernhard said, "he needed to be updated with the times," and "they didn't want to be identified as a hamburger joint."

In fact, in 1985 the question, "Should he stay or should he go?" was put to the customers. The vote caused bated breath, but the customers decided to keep the portly persona by a ratio of eight to two.

Big Boy has been popular with families for years, however, something was needed to appeal to children in order to occupy their time while waiting for their meal.

"I suggested we try a comic book ... and it took off immediately," Bernhard said.

After a few issues Bernhard's Big Boy was joined by his pal Dolly and the little

Lost Kinison show has UAO feeling frustrated

by Tim Maloney

Scheduling difficulties with Anderson Arena prevented UAO from bringing comedian Sam Kinison to campus this semester.

Kinison will instead bring his act to Toledo's John F. Savage Hall on Feb. 3. Joe Matessa, performing arts director for UAO, said Belkin Productions contacted him in December about the possibility of holding a Kinison show in Bowling Green.

"We were approached by an agent saying that Kinison was going to play in Toledo but wanted a larger facility and wanted to play here, but we couldn't find any available dates at Anderson so we had to turn him down," Matessa said.

An official at Belkin Productions would not say if a Bowling Green show had been under consideration.

Matessa said the athletic department, which is responsible for scheduling Anderson Arena outside of normal class hours from 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., offered only two possible dates to hold a show in Anderson Arena. The first date, Feb. 4, coincided with UAO's Mardi Gras. The second, Feb. 25, was no good for Kinison. UAO, according to Matessa, had given up on scheduling a show in Anderson Arena this semester.

"Being a campus organization that's working for campus we're running into a lot of difficulty," he said.

Ken Kavanagh, assistant athletic director in charge of scheduling for Anderson Arena, said there are more than two dates available to UAO. He said a number of openings are available in April, after the basketball season is completed.

Matessa did not know about the April dates, and said UAO would look into the possibility of bringing an act into Anderson Arena at that time. However, the prospect of a Kinison show, which Matessa said would have been successful, is lost.

Matessa approached Kavanagh in December about the possibility of a spring concert. By that time, other clubs and organizations had already contacted Kavanagh to reserve dates in the arena, thereby limiting UAO's choices.

Kavanagh said he would have been able to offer UAO more than two dates if he had been contacted in November. Matessa, on the other hand, said he cannot plan so far ahead of time.

"With the music industry you can't plan ahead of time like they want you to. We can't really call them in September and say we want a date in April," Matessa said.

UAO is experiencing general difficulty in scheduling entertainment. The UB40 show last fall lost money, according to Gale Swanka, director of the organization. The cost of the show, between the band's fee and production costs, was between $35,000 and $40,000. The revenue from ticket sales did not cover those expenses.

"Our goal isn't to make money," Matessa said. "Last semester it was UB40 or nothing at all. Their booking fit our schedule."

The size of Anderson Arena also presents UAO with a problem, Matessa said. "Anderson only seats 4,500. We have a lot of students saying UT is bringing in people and why can't we. We can't accommodate any sort of people in order to break even."

In order to cut costs, UAO is tentatively planning one or two shows for the Lenhart Grand Ballroom in the University Union. Bands under current consideration for the shows are Edie Brickell and the New Bohemians, The Violent Femmes, The Romantics and They Might Be Giants, Swanka said.

The ballroom has a capacity of 2,500, compared to 4,500 in Anderson Arena. Matessa said ticket prices for any ballroom shows would be between $4 and $6.

Campus halls available

by Ivan Groger

The quest for quality entertainment to perform at the University has been aided by the easy access to performance facilities.

Each facility has its own policy for handling events sponsored by University organizations and non-University organizations.

The Lenhart Grand Ballroom is free of charge to recognized student organizations and faculty departments, according to Dave Crooks, director of the University Union.

However, they do charge non-University clients $400 per day for use of the ballroom. The University is given first priority in terms of scheduling events in to non-University clients.

Across the lawn, at University Hall, the two theaters located there present different types of policies.

Nancy Myers, administrative secretary for the theatre department, said there is a charge for the Joe E. Brown and the Eva Marie Saint theaters if the lighting is used. A fee is dependent upon the amount of hours and number of lights used, she said.

She said the fee is also determined by whether the group using the theatre has a person familiar with the lighting system at these theaters or needs the University to hire someone.

"The theatre department schedules its activities for the year and then organizations can use the theater on a first-come first-serve basis," Myers said.

On the other side of campus, the two recital halls in Moore Musical Arts Center charge a rental fee for use of their facilities.

Kobacker Hall and Bryan Recital Hall charge a rental fee, according to Marty Porter, director of the concert office.

The rental fee for Kobacker Hall is $250 a day and Bryan Recital Hall is $150 per day, according to Porter.

"The first obligation is to the college's events," Porter said.

However, the recital halls are opened to other University events, according to Porter.

Waiters/waitresses suggest tips

by Elizabeth Masturzo

The shriek of the enemy alarm clock reverberates throughout the walls of the quiet bedroom. There are thousands of other places where the typical college student could go instead of work ... the Bahamas, Cedar Point, or even the grocery store would be more appealing to him or her right now. But like any other weekend, holiday or supposed leisure time, the student begins to prepare to be one of the better-paid and well-dressed servants to society known as the waiter or waitress.

Countless numbers of people dine in restaurants every day. After a stressful day at work, customers often take the service for granted. Waiters or waitresses are often misconceived as flawless, friendly and punctual every minute, every hour, every day.

Freshman voice major Michele Klosterman said "You've got to realize that you're going to make mistakes. You're going to spill stuff. It's inevitable. You just do it and go on — you don't get all upset about it."

Often what customers do not realize is that their waiter or waitress is responsible only for the service, not the quality of the meal or how long it takes to prepare.

■ See Waiters, page 9.

customers of Frisch's Big Boy Family Restaurant on East Wooster Street.

Stones and Temps new rock famers

NEW YORK (AP) — This year's five inductees into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame — Dion, Otis Redding, the Rolling Stones, the Temptations and Stevie Wonder — are a gathering of the soulful side of the '60s.

Formal induction ceremonies took place Wednesday night at the Waldorf-Astoria, where the three previous induction banquets have been held.

An exuberant Dion exclaimed, "I got in! I got in! This is a major moment for me. I'm conscious and breathing and right here with you and enjoying every minute."

Dion said music to him was a way to "share my feelings, love, hates, thoughts, perceptions. It is a way of connecting."

Pete Townsend, who presented the award to the Rolling Stones, said the Stones had influenced his own British band, The Who.

"The Stones were a rock band to begin with. The Who became a rock band partly because of the Stones," Townsend said.

David Ruffin, former lead singer with the Temptations, said he will always consider himself a part of the group.

"That's something I'm very proud of — to have been a part of the group and I always will be," Ruffin said.

Right now, the 20 artists or groups named to the Hall of Fame since 1986 are honorees without a home — ground has not yet been broken for the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame archives and museum in Cleveland, scheduled to open in 1992.

To be inducted, artists must have recorded more than 25 years ago. All of this year's fourth honored group had records released before Jan. 1, 1964. They were elected by more than 150 performers, producers, writers, record executives and broadcasters for their contributions to, or influence on, the course of rock 'n' roll.

Burger guru's patty secrets shared

by Dennis Robaugh

How I got through 19 years of blissful ignorance I will never know. But last week my life was changed in a way I will never forget. I discovered that my friend Zack was a burger guru.

I never suspected that he had such power and knowledge. But somewhere deep in his soul there lurked the secrets of the Burgermeister.

One day I suggested we go out for a burger. These innocent hunger pangs led to my instruction in the art of burgering by a formidable master.

The art of burgering is a little known art in America. In the '50s the evil hordes led by Ray Kroc and the various fast food chains stormtrooped across American tastebuds, destroying the finely honed skill of savoring a burger. Few people survived the onslaught with their taste intact.

Diners and greasy spoons put up a valiant effort to fight off the mass-produced, freeze-dried pseudo-burgers. But economies of scale prevailed and today there are only a few bastions of resistance left.

But I do not yet have the knowledge. I have just begun my education. I will share my experience as he took me for a burger.

"Ah Mustard Seed (that is what he calls me), you want a burger. You must be educated before you can savor the true flavor of a burger," Zack said.

He took on an aura of divine burger knowledge and a weary, whispering voice. The voice of a man who had been through the burger battles and barely survived. The voice of a man who has seen unspeakable horrors perpetrated upon all-American beef and wholesome bun. It was the voice of a burger guru.

"The perfect burger is always a double-cheeseburger, ensuring there is enough beef so that the toppings do not overpower the beef flavor. It is always ordered with the works. Ketchup, mustard, onion, mayo, pickles, tomato and lettuce. This is the standard burger, the mainstay in the taste wars," he said.

My mouth watered. My mind begged for nourishment. He went on to tell me how to recognize the perfect burger, because many of the evil hordes try to imitate it.

"When you lift the burger out of the wrapper or off the plate, the beef juices and the grease left behind should slowly congeal. The condiments should slide around slowly, sensually, yet the bun should not get mushy or slip off, Mustard Seed," he said.

"A burger must be medium-rare to preserve the juiciness. It may be fried or flame-broiled, it makes no difference," he said. "The controversy is a propaganda plot by the evil hordes to dupe us into buying their pathetic, hockey-puck simulations."

"A burger should always be eaten with a Coke or Pepsi. You are especially lucky if you get your drink from a soda fountain because it is more syrupy, Mustard Seed. If you have your burger in a bar you must have a cold beer, for that is the way it has been intended since the dawn of time," he said.

"A burger is also good to have when you're stoned, but I don't advocate that Mustard Seed," Zack said with a giggle and a funny little gleam in his eye.

"Atmosphere, my student, is an excellent indicator of where to get the perfect burger," he said. "Myles' Dairy Queen makes an excellent double-cheeseburger. The joint across from Uptown makes a quality burger, too. They have the character typical of a genuine burger haven."

If the place is a bit dingy and a bit greasy, they probably are part of the resistance, he said. He taught me the art of the burger. I will never be the same again, I never want to be.

Competition between restaurants caused by extensive overcrowding

by Christian Thompson

According to the Bowling Green phone book, students have approximately 50 local restaurants to choose from. Fifty, that is, if some of them haven't already gone out of business.

Joan Gordon, executive manager of the Bowling Green Chamber of Commerce, said she believes there are as many restaurants moving in as moving out of the city.

"Competition is tough. To succeed here a restaurant has to find that little niche. They have to do an extensive marketing study and a lot of homework. They also have to be realistic in their expectations, especially as far as summer business," Gordon said.

She said many restaurant owners pick this area because of its relatively large population and University student market.

"A university town is more cosmopolitan — composed of a faculty and staff that make up a more diverse population," Gordon said. "We also have a fairly stable economy for restaurants and a slow rate of inflation. It can't be compared to Youngstown where there have been major layoffs. The University, the city's biggest employer, is stable."

Ken Corbett, owner of Sundance and Cassidy's restaurants, said he believes there are too many restaurants in the area without much diversity.

"I think there should be more creative and unusual restaurants in the area. There are too many pizza and sandwich operations," he said. He said he believes downtown businesses are being affected by the new developments at Woodland Mall and surrounding areas.

Gordon said she believes the selection of city restaurants is slowly improving but doubts that there will be much change in the number of places that succeed and fail.

Friday/John Potter

Diners in Bowling Green frequently run into situations such as this; several different restaurants crammed in right next to, or even behind, each other.

Waiters

Amy Bennett, freshman international marketing major, said "There's things that the customer thinks are the waitress' responsibility and they aren't. It takes more than a waitress to run a restaurant."

While other businesses, such as factories, center on producing a certain production quota, waiters and waitresses center their performances around tips. Freshman elementary education major Jennifer Lucas said "Everything is done to get a tip. You have to totally go out of your way for a customer because you want a good tip. If something's wrong — you fix it."

Public relations, the most influential factor in receiving a tip, proves to be one of the hardest parts of the job, said Kraig Pyer, senior journalism major. "You have to pretend to be a people-loving person. You have to put on a front. It's like acting," he said.

A recurring tribulation is the customer's inability to tip accurately. Because waiting tables is a low-paying job, waiters and waitresses depend on everyone to leave at least some kind of tip.

"It doesn't matter who you're waiting on, whether it's President Reagan or college students, you're still only making $2.01 an hour," Pyer said.

Microbreweries make comeback

CLEVELAND (AP) — Two brothers bought and restored Cleveland's first tavern, opened Great Lakes Brewing Co., and started brewing beer last fall.

Now there's a crowd at the bar and an hour wait on weekends to dine in the rustic, 140-seat restaurant, known in the business as a "brewpub."

"We're brewing around the clock and selling it as fast as we make it," said Daniel Conway, 27, who owns the bar with his brother, Patrick.

Great Lakes is part of a burgeoning phenomene that is sweeping the nation as local brewers apply their craft in brewpubs and "microbreweries," offering a variety of brews to a local clientele.

Great Lakes patrons can choose from three different brews at $2.20 a glass with names such as Elliot's Amber, named for Elliot Ness, the famous Cleveland police inspector of the 1930s. Ness hung out at the bar and once ran for mayor of Cleveland, said Daniel Conway, 27, co-owner of the brewpub with his brother, Patrick.

Great Lakes can brew 750 to 1,000 31-gallon barrels of beer a year, a typical amount for brewpubs which offer beer for on-premise consumption.

Delivery people face gamut of job hazards

by Shelley Benson

Stolen cars. Intoxicated college students. Nudity.

Although this may sound like the story line of a low budget spring break film, it is actually what some of the delivery people for area restaurants have encountered on the job.

There are a little over a dozen restaurants in Bowling Green which make between 10 and 500 deliveries to students, businesses, and townspeople daily. Sometimes the anticipation of a hot sub or pizza can cause a person to take for granted the driver running the meal directly to their doorstep. Yet despite this fact, most local delivery people enjoy their job and some of the unusual situations which come along with it.

"I used to tell people about what appeared to be out-of-the-ordinary delivery stories," one local driver said. "Today, they've gotten to be pretty ordinary and routine!" Since he started delivering in 1974, he has had his car stolen a few times between deliveries. Luckily, it was recovered each time, once by a fellow driver.

Dealing with students who have been drinking is a situation nearly all drivers have found themselves in. Students have been known to be short on cash, attempt to receive their food with no cash at all, or simply pass out before the driver arrives.

More than one driver has greeted an occasional naked customer at the door. But the "Dedicated Driver Award" goes to a delivery man whose car stalled en route to Georgetown Manor, approximately three miles outside of Bowling Green. Just as a similar motto states, not rain, nor snow, nor automotive troubles, could keep this man from his duties. He walked almost half the distance to complete his delivery.

So remember, next time a driver hurriedly runs a snack or meal to your doorstep, please be kind. You never know what kind of a day he or she has had.

Concerts

Because of its limited budget, Matessa said UAO will never be able to bring a big-name act to Bowling Green. Large-scale concerts at Doyt Perry Field are out of the question, he said, as a result of the 1975

Poe Ditch Music Festival, the only concert ever to be held at the stadium. University and city officials decided never to allow any similar concerts in the future when the field box was burned down and the city was, according to Matessa, "trashed."

UAO has not yet permanently set its spring concerts, Matessa said, and students are encouraged to suggest names through today's survey in Friday Magazine.

dog Nugget, who was named in a contest held by the restaurants.

The Adventures of the Big Boy, produced by Webs Advertising Corporation, provides brain exercises, a pen pal club, a letters page, a national fan club with over 50,000 members and a story with a lesson.

"We subliminally suggest to do the right thing — being a good citizen and that sort of thing," Bernhard said.

The Big Boy does not suggest diet tips and the restaurants' patrons in this health-conscious nation don't seem to mind.

"No one writes (to us) about why the Big Boy is so fat," Bernhard said.

According to Bernhard, the comic did receive a letter from a couple who discovered each other as Big Boy pen pals, and their friendship blossomed into romance and marriage.

It was a matrimonial match founded on love, companionship, and ground beef.

The joys of fastfood remembered

Tongue in Cheek

by Christopher J. Dawson

When I was approached to write a column for this fabulous Dining Out edition, my first comment was along the lines of "Why me? I don't dine out. My idea of going out to dinner is a burrito at Taco Bell. I'm broke." When pressed further, I agreed to write something. Trouble was, I really didn't have anything to write about, until it occurred to me to recount my wonderful, fun-filled fast food career. Yes, that's right. I worked in the glamorous, high-paying world of fast food. Pardon me for a moment as I try to put a rein on my out-of-control sarcasm.

Seriously though, I did work in fast food. It was an Arby's in my hometown, and I worked there for exactly one year and one day. Yes, I was incredibly dumb (and occasionally still am), but I was also broke. Poverty beat out pride, so I applied and was hired after a rather extensive interview that consisted of the manager making sure that I had all my limbs and wasn't allergic to grease.

I should have said that I was. But what the heck, a job is a job. The manager implied that there would be extensive training. He was right. For three whole weeks, I extensively trained in washing dishes, with a high amount of practical experience. I guess my manager did that on purpose to see if I had the guts to stick it out. Unfortunately, I did. As I said before, I was dumb.

Once the manager saw that I would stick around, he began to let me train in other areas of the restaurant. For the most part, I trained in cleaning and maintaining the dining room, and running a cash register. I still washed dishes, though. The dining room wasn't too bad. Every time there was a lull in the amount of customers, I would run out into the dining room with a damp sponge and generally avoid my manager seeing me goof off. Oh yes, I would occasionally wipe off tables.

Out in the dining room, I came to the amazing conclusion that most if not all the customers in a fast food restaurant were slob. This startled me, because it came to my attention that I was a slob when I ate fast food. Never again, I vowed; to this day I am very clean and tidy when I eat out. My favorite customers were teenagers, who had the amazing knack of making the worst messes. I mean, the things they could do with ketchup, horseradish sauce, and salt ... anyways, I really hated it when a group of teenagers came into my nice, clean dining room and turned it into a war zone.

Beside wiping off tables, cleaning up crumbs, washing windows, and vacuuming. I had to take care of the salad bar. This required replacing the dark brown and slimy vegetables with ones that were less slimy and lighter brown. It wasn't too bad, because they gave me a really big knife to slice veggies with. This means I spent a lot of time playing Samurai Salad Man in back, throwing vegetables up into the air and trying to slice them in two in midair. I missed a lot, but hey, I wasn't paying for it! Oh yes, I also did dishes, too.

Learning to operate the cash register and deal with customers was also a joy. I have never felt more stupid in my life. I mean, I had to end everything I said with "Do you want some fries with that?" Believe me, it felt especially dumb when I worked the breakfast shift. I was also amazed by the stupidity of the customers. We had the pickiest people on the face of the earth. These people would bitch if there was too much ice in their drink, not enough ice, no salt on their fries, too much salt, the restaurant was too hot/cold, the sandwiches didn't look exactly like the ones on the TV commercials, the staff wasn't friendly enough (very valid complaint, let me tell you), and so on. Hmm, maybe doing the dishes wasn't so bad, after all.

Another aspect of working up front and handling customers was that I also got to do the drive-in. In a fast food restaurant, this is the best place to loaf around in. The manager can't see you, and except for meal times, it's pretty quiet. I used to enjoy making myself a sandwich (illegally), a milkshake (illegally) and some fries (illegally) and hiding in the drive-thru to eat my illegal lunch. However, I hated when a customer came through while I was eating. It's tough to talk over the drive-thru intercom with a full mouth. Then again, it's not like the customer could understand me if my mouth was empty. If you've ever noticed that it's impossible to understand what is said over those things when you're in a car, you should hear it in the restaurant. After a while, I got to feeling that most people who go through drive-ins are very tragically stupid. In case you're wondering, I never go through drive-ins anymore.

All in all, I don't feel too embarrassed at having worked in fast food. Okay, the job sucked. However, the money was good. I learned a few basic cooking skills, that combined with my housekeeping skills from my summer job as a maid will make me a good husband for some lucky woman someday. I also learned how to do dishes, as well as fine-tune my sarcasm. Little did I know that it would help me today! I also learned two very important facts: Don't eat in fast food restaurants (once you've learned the disgusting secrets, you tend to lose your appetite for more), and don't work in fast food restaurants. Don't make the same mistakes I did!
